When Couples Can't See a Solution

*"Two blind men followed Jesus, crying out and saying,
'Son of David, have mercy on us!'"*

Sometimes solutions to difficulties or courses of action that address changing family needs seem illusive or nonexistent to couples. In Christ we can always find a path forward, but conflicting views or confusing situations may blind us to Him. The two blind men who begged Jesus for mercy provide an example for couples to follow. Just as Jesus opened their eyes according to their faith, so He will open our eyes according to our faith. How do you and your spouse make decisions at times of impasse and confusion? How do you seek God at these times? Discuss ways you can be more intentional in seeking direction from God when making decisions for your family's well-being.
