"Of Such Is the Kingdom: A Practical Theology of Disability" by Summer Kinard

"My...strongest memory of hospitality took place in our home... When the people arrived, we seated everyone, ate, and talked about knowing God. But there was a surprise waiting for me in that gathering. I looked around the table at two blind friends, an autistic friend, a friend born with only one arm, and other friends with no apparent disabilities. I was surprised by an unspeakable joy. We had laid the table for friends, and I met God there among us...When every member is included, the Body of Christ starts to look like God."
